RECOUNT OF BALLOTS ASKED FOR

W. H. BRALEY ALLEGES SHORT-
AGE IN ALL BOXES OF PON-TOTO COUNTY.

A petition has been filed in district court, which, if the allegations are true, would indicate that Pontotoc county elections are conducted by the biggest bunch of wooden-heads on record, the vote of every box in the county being challenged in the race for state committeeman.

The petition is signed by W. H. Braley, who asks for an order from the court to open all the boxes and recount the vote for this office. The petition alleges that he is entitled to the following votes at the various boxes in addition to that accredited to him on the face of the returns: Ward 1, Ada, 3; Ward 2, 7; Ward 3, 3; Ward 4, 10; Allen, 2; Francis, 11; Stonewall, 4; East Roff, 2; West Roff, 2; Fitzhugh, 2; Center, 12; Midland, 2; Oakman, 10; Bebee, 2; Ahlosa, 2; Maxwell, 8; Daggs, 4; Capitol Hill, 9; Egypt, 5; Knox, 2; Lovelady, 4; Tyrola, 1; Steedman, 5; Lanham, 2; Union Valley, 2; Conway, 6; Sunshine, 2; Dolberg, 2; Frisco, 5; Hart, 2; Lightning Ridge, 2; Jesse, 1; Lula, 1; Walden, 1; Owl Creek, 2; Lawrence, 2; Franks, 1.

These figures would add 109 votes to Mr. Braley's plurality.

When asked about his position in the matter Mr. Angel said he would interpose no objection to a recount of the ballots; that he wants nothing he is not entitled to, and that he is willing for the voice of the people to rule.

BIG FORTUNE FOR

MUSKOGEE WOMAN

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Fred E. Turner, of this city, learned Tuesday that she is one of the five direct heirs to an estate in England valued at about $91,000,000. The estate lies in Yorkshire, in the northeast part of England, comprising nearly one whole county or English shire. While a large part of the estate is in English banks, a larger part consists of land, castles and valuable personal property.

The vast wealth descended to the American members of the family from Sarah Payne, who was Mrs. Turner's great grandmother. On her death an effort was made to find her American descendants. Five years ago the first intimation of the inheritance reached Mrs. Turner and the other heirs. Boston attorneys have been working on the case, and Tuesday Mrs. Turner was informed that the estate would be settled within the next few months.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner will leave for England in October or November to attend the final details of the settlement. Mrs. Turner is the only heir living in Oklahoma.

J. W. Westbrook left this morning for Sherman, where he will spend the remainder of the week with his mother. Monday he will begin work for the Home Title & Guaranty Co.

While spending a quiet hour in the city park a day or two ago, L. Rosenfield was impressed with the possibility of small children being drowned in the lake while their parents for the time being were not watching them. Several small children were playing around the water at the time, and it would have been easy for one to have slipped and been drowned before any aid could possibly reach him. It is Mr. Rosenfield's idea that a fence entirely around the lake would be of great service and might save the city a big damage suit some time.

Miss Temple Westbrook, who was here on a visit to her father, J. W. Westbrook, returned today to her home at Austin, Texas.

The News-Herald is glad to chronicle that its telegraph editor, Ira D. Mullinax and linotype operator's wife, Mrs. Jerry Dollins, are both recovering from typhoid fever.—Shawnee News-Herald.

PONTOTOC CO. AS A FRUIT CENTER

DEMONSTRATED THAT THIS SECTION IS ONE OF THE BEST LOCATED IN THE SOUTH.

The fruit industry in Pontotoc and adjoining counties is fast becoming a thing of magnitude. Up to date, when hardly half the season is gone, the Katy railroad has shipped 46 cars of peaches from the district between Konawa and Tupelo. The Frisco has shipped five from Roff alone. The Katy officials stated that they are sure they will have over one hundred cars before the crop is exhausted. These cars average 500 bushels each. The price of the fruit varies from $1.00 to $1.50 per bushel. Even at $1.00 per bushel the extra amount of money brought in to this part of the state from this one product will be no small sum.

Seventeen cars have been loaded in Pontotoc county alone—eight at Ada, five at Roff, and four at Tyrola. It is stated that Roff has more peaches than Ada, but they don't appear to be ripening so fast. At Ada W. B. Johnson and Brothers have shipped two cars and will have at least a dozen more. George Frierson has an orchard of 750 trees. From this small number he has loaded four cars. Joe Rushing is supplying the city with peaches has shipped one car and is loading another, all from a small orchard.

Until 1910 not a single car of peaches had ever been shipped from this part of Oklahoma. In that season one car went. Something like five or six were shipped last year. At the present rate of increase, this part of the state will soon be equal to the famous peach region of Georgia. The industry is growing in leaps and bounds. So far as this class of fruit goes, the Elberta produced in Oklahoma is just as fine in flavor if not superior to the Georgia peach.

Another thing about the peach industry is that the main season comes at a time when the other farm crops demand little attention. The trees need some attention during the winter months, but very little work is required to keep them in perfect condition during any part of the year. Some farmers, using fruit simply as a side crop, are making more money on it than they are making on corn or cotton.

Vigorous 2-Year-Old Celebrates.

Timber Lake, S. D., Aug. 14.—The town of Timberlake, whose paved streets and up-to-date business houses and residences occupy a tract that was only a prairie waste two years ago, today began a three-day celebration of its second birthday anniversary. A feature of the celebration will be speeches by Thomas Sterling, Democratic candidate for governor, and other public men of prominence.

Rear Admiral Zane Retires.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Rear Admiral Abraham V. Zane, who has been serving the past year as president of the board of inspections for shore stations, was placed on the retired list of the navy today on account of having reached the age limit for active service.

George T. Searcy has again been nominated for the legislature from Coal county. It is dollars to doughnuts that if any Socialist went into the primary they didn't vote for Searcy.

In Coal county there were fifteen candidates for the Democratic nomination for sheriff. This much sought office went to Jesse Phillips, who received a plurality of eight votes over his nearest competitor. The lowest on the list received six votes, but has no doubt been assured by fully 100 that they were the ones who remembered him in his time of need.

NORMAL NOTES.

Prof. Perkins is holding the fort in the absence of President Briles.

The new dining room in the basement is now being fitted up in the most modern fashion. New plastering is being put on, a partition placed across a part of the room, and the whole thing improved. Mrs. Price expects to make this a very attractive place. As was shown this summer, a number of students want good board right near the building, and this will supply this long-felt need.

Mr. Harrison is remodeling the boiler and coal room. He expects to have no trouble the coming winter as there was last winter in the mater of fire. With the new high-pressure boiler and everything else in good order, there seems to be no chance for trouble along that line.

Between twelve and fifteen hundred books have just been received at the library. These books were selected with the greatest of care, and are of the very best type. The Normal has long been in need of a good library; and, while this is not a large collection, it is a good start. With the Congressional publications that are received regularly and with an increase from year to year, it is only a matter of a few years till East Central will have a splendid library.

Prof. Lilly has compiled statistics from the records of the school and finds that the average age of the pupils who have attended this institution to be 20.53 years. This certainly offsets all accusations that the student body is nothing but young children.

THANKS DEMOCRATIC VOTERS

To the Democratic Voters of Pontotoc County:

It is with a sense of profound gratitude that I extend my most heartfelt thanks to the Democratic voters of Pontotoc county for the support given men in the recent primary election for the position of State Committeeman on the Democratic ticket.

As is best known to the voters themselves I made no campaign for the position, not feeling called upon to make any campaign for a position that was purely honorary, however I am under no wrong impression when I state that I was opposed by all the arts known to those who opposed me, as witness those who have been so active to have me counted out of the race; they seeking every subterfuge possible since the returns have been in to have the little box at Frisco (Stonewall Township) that gave me a small majority, counted out, that their candidate may be counted in.

Regardless of the final results I desire to extend to each voter, personally, my gratitude and thanks for his support, and to the several friends who interested themselves in my behalf I am profoundly grateful, and to each of the newspapers, composing the public press of the county who extended me much courtesy, by free announcements, I am very grateful.

With an earnest desire to promote party peace and harmony, without yielding or sacrificing honest democratic principles, I am

Gratefully Yours,

C. T. ANGEL.

This evening Gale and Gale, the fun makers, will make their last appearance at the Majestic in a complete change of program. These comedians have not been excellent here. "The Divine Solution," showing the unerring justice of Providence, is a picture story with a powerful significance. "On the Brink of the Chasm," a splendid Indian story.

"A Gentleman of Fortune," is the title of a fine picture that patrons of the DeSota will see this evening—a picture full of intense interest. "The Parson and the Medicine Man," is an Imp drama, in which Marguerite Fisher plays the leading role. The scene of this picture is in the Rocky Mountains.

The Lyric offers a splendid program of 3,000 feet of films this evening. Everything first-class. Coming tomorrow: Mozelle Tabloid Stock Co.

A Longer School Term.

The school board of Ada district has levied the constitutional limit of five mills for the support of the public schools and will call a special election to ask for another mill. This additional levy is needed for two purposes, to connect the north and east side schools with the sewer system, and the extension of the term to nine months, in keeping with all other well regulated and up-to-date schools.

The council established an additional sewer district in North Ada principally for the benefit of the school, but the board has been unable to connect with it because of a lack of funds. The east side school is likewise unconnected, and the citizens living near the school house are demanding that the connection be made at once.

That the town should have a nine-months' term of school goes without saying. Ada is probably the largest town in the state that tries to make out with an eight-months' term. It is impossible to do the work in this short term that is demanded of a first-class school, and Ada is too progressive to drop behind in its school facilities.

The additional levy, if made, will add $1.00 to each $1,000 valuation, a sum very insignificant when compared with the benefits received.

Baby's Voice

Every woman's heart responds to the charm and sweetness of a baby's voice, because nature intended her for motherhood. But even the loving nature of a mother shrinks from the ordeal because such a time is usually a period of suffering and danger. Women who use Mother's Friend are saved much discomfort and suffering, and their systems, being thoroughly prepared by this great remedy, are in a healthy condition to meet the time with the least possible suffering and danger. Mother's Friend is recommended only for the relief and comfort of expectant mothers; it is in no sense a remedy for various ills, but its many years of success, and the thousands of endorsements received from women who have used it are a guarantee of the benefit to be derived from its use. This remedy does not accomplish wonders but simply assists nature to perfect its work. Mother's Friend allays nausea, prevents caking of the breasts, and in every way contributes to strong, healthy motherhood. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for our free book for expectant mothers.

LESSON OF INTEREST

FIGURES THAT ARE CALCULATED TO STAGGER IMAGINATION.

What Old King Midas Might Have Accumulated Starting With the Modest Saving of Ten Cents a Week.

Why didn't King Midas, the gold lover, try to save ten cents a week? says the Chicago Tribune. He could have given the world a wonderful example of the value of the saving habit. Besides, he would have left money for the members of his family alive today. Midas was one of the kings of Phrygia. As the Phrygian line was wiped out by the Cimmerians about 670 B. C., we may assume he lived about 800 B. C., or at least 2,711 years ago.

If King Midas had started in saving ten cents a week he would have saved a dime, therefore, on each of the 140,870 weeks. This would make him the neat little sum of $14,087.20. Although not a fortune in these days, $14,087.20 is quite a fair sum to save by giving up one cigar a week. But there is more to follow.

In those days of political upheaval and commercial uncertainty, capital was entitled to a bigger return on its investment than it would be today. The risk was much greater. Though we have no actual records of Phrygian rates of usury, it is fair to assume that the Midas' account drew ten per cent. Interest compounded annually for at least the first 2,000 years, or until the commercial world had reached a comparatively recent stage of development.

Beginning, therefore, 800 years before Christ, Midas put into his savings ten cents every week. At the end of the first ten weeks he had a dollar. The interest on one dollar for one year is not great, even at ten per cent, but it adds another dime to the ten already saved. At the end of the second year there is something more than two dimes to be added.

At the end of the first hundred years the accumulation on the first dollar, at ten per cent. compounded, would be $13,780.66. Thus Midas, in the year 700 B. C. would have had $13,780.66, resulting from his first ten weeks' savings. The compounding goes on through the next century so that at the end of 200 years, in the year 500 B. C., Midas would have had $189,906,590.04 from his first dollar.

At the end of the next hundred years, or in 400 B. C., the results from those first ten dimes put away would be $2,619,038,149,100.63. Continuing this compounding through the following 2,411 years it is not a complicated mathematical problem to arrive at the sum Midas would have today from his first one dollar saved.

Remember, moreover, this sum, which would be up among the uncountable trillions of dollars, would represent the increment of only one dollar put away by Midas. Midas himself, busily saving dimes, would have started a new series of dollar pyramids every ten weeks. At the end of the first year's saving he would have started five and a half of these stupendous fortunes. To compare any one of these with the $14,087.20 he would have saved if he had received no interest, certainly represents the interest habit in a favorable light.

Tribute to the Onion.

Kill the onion and you leave a gap in the universe. Kill anything else and there is a substitute. The potato is akin to the cereals, squash and cabbage and turnips and cauliflower are of the same family, beans are elongated peas, the lemon is a pessimistic orange, beef reincarnated grass, watermelons just the survivor of a very fit cucumber, and so on. But the onion is sui generis, alone, unique, triumphant. It is a special creation to tempt the palate of a weary world. It proves the futility of man's wisdom. He might have guessed at everything else under the sun, but he would have never guessed an onion. Science may deduce a new star before it becomes visible, or radium before its discovery, but this succulent, fragrant, starchy vegetable would have gone unvented forever, had not its own insinuating, yet not bashful qualities forced themselves into tear-brimmed eyes and luscious anticipatory lips. With what a mixture of gratitude and awe should we view the spectacle of nature turning her energies to the transmuting of mere clay into a vegetable with an artistic temperament.

American Architecture.

"There is an American architecture," said the traveler, "but not many Americans will believe it until they have taken a course in moving picture shows in foreign countries. That was what convinced me. Owing to ignorance of foreign languages we sought most of our dramatic entertainment in Europe from the cinematograph. No matter where we went one-half the pictures were American. Sometimes they were so labeled, sometimes not, but whether they were or not we soon learned to tell American pictures by the architecture. Sky-scrapers, of course, were the chief distinguishing mark, but high-steepled stone houses and frame cottages with two or three wooden steps leading up to a porch were just as unmistakably American. All the way from Inverness to Cairo the minute we set eyes on one of those houses we knew we were looking at something that couldn't be duplicated outside the United States, and all the rest of the audience knew it, too."

VINITA ASYLUM WILL BE

OPENED NOVEMBER 1ST

Oklahoma City, Aug. 14.—In preparation for the opening of the new state asylum for the feeble minded at Vinita, Governor Crouce Monday appointed Dr. F. M. Adams of Big Cabin superintendent of the institution, to take office November 1. The buildings and equipment are expected to be turned over by the contractors a month prior to the date named, but several weeks will be required to put the home in proper shape to care for the inmates when they arrive at the asylums at Fort Supply and Norman.

The circumstances attending the transfer of several hundred patients from Norman to Fort Supply three years ago will be recalled by the similar migration of dependents which will take place early in November. When this transfer has been effected, more than one-third of the state's feeble minded charges will be cared for at Vinita, and as many more as possible at Fort Supply. The number at Norman will be reduced to a minimum as fast as accommodations can be provided at the regular institutions.

A Good Examination.

Under the rules of the postoffice department mailing clerks in the principal offices must once a year take examinations on their proficiency. A few days ago James Hounshell, of the Ada office, was examined and made a grade of 99.41, this being the best grade made by a clerk in any of the second class offices on the Frisco. A Sulphur man ranked second, being a few points below Mr. Hounshell.

OVER VETO OF THE PRESIDENT

HOUSE PASSES WOOL TARIFF BILL BY MARGIN OF 5 VOTES. GOES TO SENATE.

Washington, Aug. 14.—By the narrow margin of five votes, the House Tuesday passed the wool tariff revision bill over President Taft's veto.

The vote, 174 to 80, was made possible only by the defection of 12 Republicans who voted with the Democrats. The announcement of the result produced a wild scene in the House and amid great confusion the Republican leaders protested that Speaker Clark must count as voting ten members who answered "present" to their names, a ruling which would have democratic program by overcoming the five vote margin over the necessary two-thirds. This the speaker declined to do. Less than an hour after the wool bill had been re-passed in the House, conferees on the sugar tariff bill met, and disagreed. They determined to report to the House and Senate that it had been found impossible to reach a compromise between the Underwood and Lodge-Bristow bills.

This action is expected to mark the end of the sugar tariff consideration in the present session and the excise tax bill, which was framed to make up revenues that would have been lost by the reduction of the sugar tariff, also probably will remain in conference when congress adjourns.

While the Democratic and Progressive leaders of the House think the bill can be passed in the Senate over the president's veto, they will continue the demand for action on the cotton tariff measure.

The vote on the wool bill came as a surprise to House Republican leaders. When they discovered that defection from their ranks was to be expected, it was too late to prevent it.

Frick's Aladdin Lawn Party.

Boston, Aug. 14.—The "billion-dollar lawn party," which Henry C. Frick, the steel magnate, is to give at his Frick's Crossing estate on Friday night of this week, promises to establish a new high-water mark for lavish entertainment among the North Shore colony, whose summer residents include many of the wealthiest and most prominent families in all sections of the country. Excepting President Taft, every man present will be a millionaire, and the entire affair will be conducted on a scale of magnificence calculated to make the old New Englanders gasp with wonder.

A Nahant contracting firm has signed a contract which obliges them to lay a smooth and perfect dancing floor on the Frick lawn between the hours of 7 and 9 Friday evening, and to take it up again between the hours of 1 and 3 the following morning. This contract is typical of all the arrangements that have been made for the fete. It is Mr. Frick's intention that his lawn shall present its usually orderly and well-kept appearance at dark on Friday evening and again at daybreak Saturday morning, but for the four hours between 9 p. m. and 1 a. m. it will be transformed into a fairyland. It is said that the party will represent the largest gathering of millionaires ever assembled at one time in this or any other country.

WYOMING FRONTIER CELEBRATION BEGINS

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 14.—Throngs of visitors from Denver and the East arrived in Cheyenne today for the opening of the sixteenth annual frontier celebration. Fully 5,000 people are guests of the city already and every train is crowded to its utmost capacity. Many cowboys are in the city from all parts of Wyoming, and they, with the Indians in their red and yellow blankets, are attracting much attention from the visitors. The festivities will continue until the end of the week. Among the events on the program are roping and bucking contests for the world's championship, shooting competitions, cowboy races, exhibitions of fancy riding, Indian races, branding contests and military maneuvers by a detail of United States troops from Fort D. A. Russell.

BANKER CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

SHAWNEE BANKER ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF TAKING $3,000 FROM THE VAULT.

Shawnee, Okla., Aug. 14.—The issuance of a warrant Tuesday evening for Francis J. Fleming, former part owner and cashier of the Union State bank, made public the looting of the strong box of the bank and the subsequent recovery of the money. When the safe was opened Monday morning a sack containing $3,300 of the reserve fund in gold was found missing. Over $5,000, $1,700 of which was also in gold and the rest in currency, was not touched. Suspicion pointed to Fleming, who recently sold his stock in the bank to County Attorney C. P. Holt.

Witnesses were found who had seen Fleming in the bank at 4 o'clock Monday morning. No one but Fleming and the assistant cashier knew the combination of the safe or the fact that the time lock was always set to open about four on Monday morning. Confronted with the evidence, Fleming weakened and dug up the money where he had it buried in a potato patch near town. The issuance of the warrant followed.

Martin C. Fleming, uncle of the accused man, and for years his sponsor, is president of the bank. Those who saw Fleming in the bank Monday morning thought nothing of it on account of his former connection with the institution.

J. E. Sloan and E. J. Merritt, jury commissioners, have completed the work of selecting jurors for the next terms of court. J. D. Patterson, the third member of the commission, was taken ill and had to leave.

CHAPTER VII.

In Which the Parson and Mr. Pepper Declare Their Independence.

That afternoon, when dinner was over, the Reverend John decided to make a few duty calls. The first of these he determined should be on the Peppers.

The Pepper house was situated just off the main road on the lane leading over the dunes to the ocean and the light. It was a small building, its white paint dingy and storm beaten, and its little fenced-in front yard dotted thickly with clumps of silver-leaf saplings. A sign, nailed crookedly on a post, informed those seeking such information that within was to be found "Abishai G. W. Pepper, Tax Collector, Assessor, Boots and Shoes Repaired." And beneath this was fastened a shingle with the chalked notice, "Salt Hay for Sale."

The boot and shoe portion of the first sign was a relic of other days. Kyan had been a cobbler once, but it is discouraging to wait three or four weeks while the pair of boots one has left to be resoled are forgotten in a corner.

The minister walked up the dusty lane, lifted the Pepper gate, swung it back on its one hinge, and knocked at the front door. No one coming in answer to the knock, he tried again. Then from somewhere in the rear of the house came the sound of a human voice.

"Hill! it called faintly. 'Whoever you be, don't bust that door down. Come round here."

Ellery "came along" as far as the angle where the ell joined the main body of the house. So far as he could see every door and window was closed and there were no signs of life. However, he stepped to the door, a green-painted affair of boards, and ventured another knock.

"Don't start that poundin' again!" protested the voice. "Come round to t'other side where I be."

So around went the Reverend John, smiling broadly. But even on "t'other side" there was no one to be seen. And no door, for that matter.

"Why!" exclaimed the voice, "if 'tain't Mr. Ellery! How d'ye do? Glad to see you, Mr. Ellery. Fine day, ain't it? Here I be at this window."

Sure enough; one of the windows on this side of the house was raised about six inches at the bottom, the shade was up, and peering beneath the sash the minister discerned the expressive features of Abishai Pepper—or as much of those features as the size of the opening permitted to be seen.

"Oh!" exclaimed the visitor, "Is that you, Mr. Pepper? Well, I'm glad to see you, at last. You are rather hard to see, even now."

"Er—er—come to call, did you?" "Why, yes, that was my intention."

"Hum! Er—er—Lavinia, she's gone over to Thankful Payne's. She heard that Thankful's cousin up to Middleboro had died—passed away, I mean—and she thought she'd run over and find out if Thankful was willing anything. She said she'd be back pretty soon."

"Very well. Then, as she won't be gone long, perhaps I'll come in and wait."

"You see, Mr. Ellery," stammered Kyan, "I—I'd like to have you come in fast rate, but—er—Lavinia she's got the key. She—she—Oh, consarn it all, Mr. Ellery, she's locked me in this room a-purpose, so's I won't get out and go somewheres without her knowin' it."

"She done it a-purpose," continued Kyan, in a burst of confidence. "She had me put one of them new-fangled spring locks on the door of this room t'other day, 'cause she said she was afraid of tramps and wanted some place to shut herself up in if one of 'em come. And—after dinner to-day she sent me in here for somethin' and then slammed the door on me. Said she called I'd stay put till she got back from Thankful's. She knew might well I couldn't get out of the window, 'cause it won't open no further'n 'tis now. I wa'n't never so provoked in my life. 'Tain't no way to treat your own brother, lockin' him up like a young one; now, is it?"

"I don't know. You're of age, Mr. Pepper, and you must decide for yourself. I think I should declare my independence. Really, I must go. I—"

"Stop your foolishness! Oh!—I—I ask your pardon, Mr. Ellery. That ain't no way to talk to a minister. But I'm goin' to go out when I want to if I bust a hole through the clapboards. I ain't fascinatin'. You ask any woman—except her—if I be, and see what they say. What'll I do?"

"Ha, ha! I don't know, I'm sure. You might lock her up, I suppose, just for a change."

"Hey!" There was a sound from behind the pane as if the imprisoned one had slapped his knee. "By gum! I never thought of that. Would you now, Mr. Ellery? Would you? Shhh! shhh! somebody's comin'. Maybe it's her. Run around to the door, Mr. Ellery, quick. And don't tell her I've seen you, for mercy sakes! Don't now, will ye? Please! Run!"

The minister did not run, but he walked briskly around the corner. Sure enough, Lavinia was there, just unlocking the door. She expressed herself as very glad to see the caller, ushered him into the sitting room and disappeared, returning in another moment with her brother, whom she unblushingly said had been taking a nap. Abishai did not contradict her; instead, he merely looked apprehensively at the minister.

The call was a short one. Lavinia did seven-eighths of the talking and Ellery the rest. Kyan was silent.

He told no one of Kyan's confidential disclosure, and, after some speculation as to whether or not there might be a sequel, put the whole ludicrous affair out of his mind. A week from the following Sunday he dined in state at the Daniels' table. Captain Elkanah was gracious and condescending. Annabel was more than that. She was dressed in her newest gown and was so very gushing and affable that the minister felt rather embarrassed. When, after the meal was over, Captain Elkanah excused himself and went upstairs for his Sabbath nap, the embarrassment redoubled. Miss Annabel spoke very confidentially of her loneliness without "congenial society," of how very much she did enjoy Mr. Ellery's intellectual sermons, and especially what a treat it had been to have him as a guest.

He left the big house as soon as he could without giving offense, and started back toward the parsonage. But the afternoon was so fine and the early summer air so delightful that he changed his mind and, jumping the fence at the foot of Cannon Hill, set off across the fields toward the bluffs and the bay shore.

The sun was low in the west as he entered the grove of pines on the bluff. The red light between the boughs made brilliant carpet patterns on the thick pine needles and the smell was balsam and sweet. Between the tree trunks he caught glimpses of the flats, now partially covered, and they reminded him of his narrow escape and of Nat Hammond, his rescuer.

Thinking of the Hammond family reminded him of another member of it. Not that he needed to be reminded; he had thought of her often enough since she ran away from him in the rain that night. And then he saw her. She was standing just at the outer edge of the grove, leaning against a tree and looking toward the sunset. She wore a simple white dress and her hat hung upon her shoulders by its ribbons. The rosy light edged the white gown with pink and the fringes of her dark hair were crinkly lines of fire. Her face was grave, almost sad.

John Ellery stood still, with one foot uplifted for a step. The girl looked out over the water and he looked at her. Then a crow, one of several whirling above the pines, spied the intruder and screamed a warning. The minister was startled and stepped back. A dead limb beneath his foot cracked sharply. Grace turned and saw him.

"Oh!" she cried. "Who is it?" Ellery emerged from the shadow.

"Don't be frightened, Miss Van Horne," he said. "It is—er—I—"

"You came to see the sunset, I suppose?" she said hurriedly, as if to head off a question. "So did I. It is a beautiful evening for a walk, isn't it?"

She had said precisely the same thing on that other evening, when they stood in the middle of "Hammond's Turn-off" in the driving rain. He remembered it, and so, evidently did she, for she colored slightly and smiled.

"I mean it this time," she said. "I'm glad you didn't get cold from your wetting the other day."

"Oh! I wasn't very wet. You wouldn't let me lend you the umbrella, so I had that to protect me on the way home."

"Not then; I meant the other morning when Nat—Cap'n Hammond—met you on the flats. He said you were wading the main channel and it was over your boots."

"It was worse than that, a good deal worse. It might have been my last cruise. I'm pretty certain that I owe the captain my life. That part of the channel I proposed swimming was exactly where two men have been drowned, so people say. I'm not a very strong swimmer, and they were. So, you see."

Grace cried out in astonishment. "Oh!" she exclaimed. Then pointing toward the bay, she asked: "Out there, by the end of that leader, was it?"

"Yes, that was it."

She drew a long breath. Then, after a moment:

"And Nat spoke as if it was all a joke," she said.

"No doubt he did. From what I hear of your brother, he generally refers to his own plucky, capable actions as jokes. Other people call them something else."

"He isn't my brother," she interrupted absently. "I wish he was."

She sighed as she uttered the last sentence.

"No, of course he isn't your real brother; I forgot. But he must seem like one."

"Yes," rather doubtfully.

"You must be proud of him."

"I am," there was nothing doubtful this time.

"Miss Van Horne! What did your uncle say about Cap'n Nat's meeting me the other day?"

"Uncle Eben doesn't know. Nat didn't tell anyone but me. He doesn't boast. And uncle would be glad he helped you. As I told you before, Mr. Ellery, I'm not ashamed of my uncle. He has been so good to me that I never can repay him, never! When my own father was drowned he took me in, a little orphan that would probably have been sent to a home. When he needed money most he said nothing to me, but insisted that I should be educated. I didn't know until afterwards of the self-sacrifice my four years at the Middleboro Academy meant to him."

"So you went away to school?" he mused. "This is why—"

"That is why I don't say 'never done nothin' and 'be you' and 'hain't neither.' Yes, thank you, that's why. I don't wonder you were surprised."

She was going, but the minister had something to say. He stepped forward and walked beside her.

"Just a minute, please," he urged.

"Miss Van Horne, I do understand. I do respect your uncle. We have a mutual friend, you and I, and through her I have come to understand many things."

Grace turned and looked at him.

"A mutual friend?" she repeated.

"Oh, I know. Mrs. Coffin?"

"Yes; Mrs. Coffin. She's a good woman and a wise one."

"I know. I feel the same way about her. She means so much to me. I love her more than anyone else in the world, except uncle, of course—and Nat. I miss her very much since—since—"

"Since I came, you mean. I'm sorry. I wish—I hate to think I am the cause which separates you two. It isn't my fault, as you know."

"Oh! I know that."

"Yes, and I object to having others choose my friends for me, people who, because of a fanatical prejudice, stand in the way of— If it wasn't for that, you might call and see Mrs. Coffin, just as you used to do."

"But it's impossible. Uncle respects and is fond of Aunt Kezia, but he wouldn't hear of my visiting the parsonage."

She was close to the overhanging edge of the bluff and the sod upon which she stood was bending beneath her feet. He sprang forward, caught her about the waist, and pulled her back. The sod broke and rattled down the sandy slope. She would have had a slight tumble, nothing worse, had she gone with it. There was no danger; and yet the minister was very white as he released her.

She, too, was pale for a moment, and then crimson.

"Thank you," she gasped. "I—I must go. It is late. I must go. I—I think the sunsets from this point are the finest I have ever seen. I come here every Sunday afternoon to see them."

This remark was given merely to cover embarrassment, but it had an unexpected effect.

"You do?" cried the minister. The next moment he was alone. Grace Van Horne had vanished in the gloom of the pine thickets.

It was a strange John Ellery who walked slowly back along the path. He saw nothing real, and heard nothing, not even the excited person who, hidden behind the bayberry bush, hailed him as he passed. It was not until this person rushed forth and seized him by the arm that he came back to the unimportant affairs of this material earth.

"Why! Why, Mr. Pepper!" he gasped. "Are you here? What do you want?"

"Am I here?" panted Kyan. "Ain't I been here for the last twenty minutes waitin' to get a chance at you? Ain't I been chasin' you from Dan to Beersheba all this dummed—excuse me—afternoon? Oh, my godfrees mighty! what's the matter?"

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which Miss Daniels Determines to Find Out.

The hysterical Mr. Pepper doubtless expected his clergyman to be almost as much upset as he was by the news of his action. But John Ellery was provokingly calm.

"Hush! Hush!" he commanded. "Wait a minute. Let me understand this thing. Some one is locked up, you say. Who is it? Where—"

"Who is it? Ain't I tellin' you. It's Lavinia. She went into that spare room where I was t'other day and I slammed the spring lock to on her. Then I grabbed the key and run. That was afore three this afternoon; now it's 'most night and I ain't dast to go home. What'll she say when I let her out? I got to let her out, ain't I? She can't starve to death in there, can she? And you told me to do it! You did! Oh—"

"Well, then, I don't see why you can't go home and—hum—I don't like to advise your telling a lie, but you might let her infer that it was an accident. Or, if you really mean to be your own master, you can tell her you did it purposely and will do it again if she ever tries the trick on you."

"I tell her that! I tell her! O Mr. Ellery, don't talk so. You don't know Lavinia; she ain't like most women. If I should tell her that she'd—I don't know's she wouldn't take and horse-whip me. Or commit suicide. She's said she would afore now if—I—"

"Nonsense! She won't do that, you needn't worry." He burst into another laugh, but checked himself, as he saw the look of absolute distress on poor Kyan's face.

"Never mind, Mr. Pepper," he said. "We'll think of some plan to smooth matters over. I'll go home with you now and we'll let her out together."

The little house was dark and still as they approached it.
